Bungalow Heaven

For almost one hundred years the house at 279 Littleton Street has been a hidden historic treasure. Located in the heart of the near campus neighborhood, this stunning 1915 craftsman bungalow had been in use as a rental property. We are thrilled to report that it now serves a new purpose as the office of New Chauncey Housing Incorporated (NCHI).

NCHI is a non-profit housing corporation for the City of West Lafayette. Our mission is to assist low-to moderate-income persons or families find affordable housing in the City of West Lafayette. But another facet of our organization's mission is neighborhood stabilization and historic preservation. We are invested in restoring neglected homes into fully functioning ones that are both historically authentic and comfortable to live in.

This classic American bungalow is a testament to our mission, as well as to the dynamic era in which it was built. As evidenced by its beautiful woodwork, built-ins, and original (and working) bathroom, 279 Littleton exhibits the charm and flair of early 20th century West Lafayette. It is our desire to preserve the house in a way that will enhance our community well into this new century. We also want our office to be available for others who are pursuing this same goal.

In addition to functioning as an office, 279 Littleton will become a hub of community activity. We are excited to be providing organizational space for the West Lafayette Memories Project (see pg 2). And, thanks to our house's ample meeting space, we now have the ability to offer our clients, neighbors, and friends training workshops and public lectures. In the coming months we will host presentations by local experts that highlight the great features and potential of our community. Topics will include home maintenance, energy efficiency and sustainability, financial workshops, historic restoration, and gardening.

The Life of Frank Lloyd Wright

You will not want to miss Linda Eales, Associate Curator of the John E. Christian House, Samara and Tommy Kleckner, Director of Indiana Landmarks, Western Region who will team up to present a talk on someone they are very passionate and knowledgeable about: Frank Lloyd Wright.

This promises to be an exciting evening. Nothing will be off-limits. Seldom heard stories of Wright's personal life and career will be woven into a narrative of one of the most fascinating architects (and personalities!) of the 20th Century.

Linda and Tommy will also show one-of-a-kind memorabilia and have information about scheduling a special tour for neighbors of Samara, the West Lafayette Frank Lloyd Wright - designed home of Dr. John Christian.

Special thanks to Mike Stinnett who volunteers to keep our properties beautiful!
